

Future Global Leaders Program

Dean Peter F. Cowhey explains the dynamics of the societies and governments in the Americas and Asia driving the "Pacific Century."

Experience graduate-level education at a world-renowned school of international relations. The Global Leadership Institute (GLI) in the School of International Relations and Pacific Studies (IR/PS) at UC San Diego offers programs for talented university students to enhance their understanding of graduate studies in the United States.

Meet other undergraduates from top universities in the Pacific region by participating in a program that includes:

- Graduate-level lectures from professors
- Workshop on graduate school admissions
- Training in leadership skills development
- Exposure to career professionals
- Opportunities to meet American students
- Certificate awarded upon completing program

IR/PS has distinguished itself as an institution with innovative research and a multidisciplinary curriculum.

Faculty lectures can address current issues in the following areas:

*International Management
International Economics
Comparative Policy and Politics
Environmental Policy
Development Economics
Nonprofit Management
Regional Studies*

UC San Diego and Future Global Leaders students pose for a group photo at the western-most edge of campus. To their surprise, a paraglider decides to join in the fun.

Future Global Leaders Sample Curriculum Agenda

"My experience in FGL was impressive, 'playing hard and working hard.' Studying was and challenging...debating with professors in class. My first experience abroad was in San Diego, and I will have a lot of great memories."
